

Touch of an Artist

Vincent Surgical Arts & MedSpa prioritizes patient experience with attention to detail and a wide range of both surgical and nonsurgical cosmetic procedures.

Dr. Drake Vincent was an accomplished tennis player with dreams of playing professionally. He competed against players like Andre Agassi and Michael Chang. During his time as a teaching tennis pro at a local club, the father of one of his students invited him to observe a facial surgery in his operating room. Seeing the detail and artistry of maxillofacial surgery, in that moment Drake Vincent knew he wanted to be a surgeon. It would be a long journey to master this specialty, and there were many academic requirements to achieve his goals.

He first graduated from the University of Utah with a degree in biology and went on to attend Oregon Health Sciences University, where he graduated magna cum laude with his Doctorate of Dental Medicine. He then pursued a Doctorate of Medicine at the University of Alabama Medical School.

After completing all of the requirements to become a dual-degreed maxillofacial surgeon, Dr. Vincent went on to complete one of the most prestigious maxillofacial residency programs under the esteemed Dr. Peter D. Waite, followed by an extensive Academy of Cosmetic Surgery fellowship in full body cosmetic surgery, during which Dr. Vincent found his calling. "I liked the fact that I could help people look and feel better," he says. "When a patient comes back for their postoperative appointment, they radiate more confidence. We can change their lives."

Slow and Steady

When it comes to cosmetic surgery, being meticulous is critical. There are many variables that could affect how your patient looks as they age. Since opening his practice in 2005, Dr. Vincent has performed more than 12,000 cosmetic surgery procedures, such as breast augmentation, facelift surgery, and rhinoplasty. It's critical each procedure is performed correctly. "There's a lot of artistry in cosmetic surgery to achieve optimal results for each patient," he says. "After so many years, I still love this challenge."

As a board-certified cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Vincent and his team at Vincent Surgical Arts & MedSpa take the time to identify patient needs and expectations, and work with them every step of the way. "It's such a privilege to help people feel happy," he says. This does not stop with his patients. As a fellowship director for the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery (AACS), Dr. Vincent gives back through his AACS fellowship program teaching up-and-coming surgeons the art of cosmetic surgery.
